

Often said today to represent doing something you can't undo.

In Latin translates as "I came, I saw, I conquered" and is referenced even today.

This quote is used today at an epitome of betrayal.

Cut out long book, and fold in half on dotted line. Cut out three match books and fold up like matchbooks. Write the famous quotes/sayings from Julius Caesar below the meanings. Cut out the pictures and glue to the top of the matchbook covers. Cut out the title of the chapter and glue to the front of the tall/skinny book.

Crossing the Rubicon

Veni, Vedi, Vici

Et tu, Brute?

Caesar the Hero

Chapter 35